

NDIS Mental Health Support Worker

Aimee

Aimee is a warm, understanding and inclusive Support Worker who is currently completing her Bachelor of Psychological Science and Social Science. She is passionate about creating genuine connections and supporting people to feel accepted, understood and empowered.

As a proud member of the LGBT+ community who identifies as queer, Aimee has a personal understanding of diverse gender identities and the importance of creating safe and affirming spaces where people can be themselves.

As someone who is neurodivergent, Aimee understands the importance of feeling accepted and supported for who you are. She values meeting people where they're at, respecting their lived experiences and providing support that is individualised and person-centred. Aimee believes everyone deserves to feel safe, respected and heard. She is passionate about building genuine connections, creating inclusive spaces and empowering participants to thrive and live life on their own terms.
